The Wise Traditions Diet for Healthy Families

Good health begins with plants and animals raised in healthy ways on mineral-rich soil; and with meats, eggs, fish, milk products, grains, legumes, fruits and vegetables that are packaged and processed in ways that preserve and enhance their naturally occurring nutrients.

Good health also requires avoiding foods that are devoid of nutrients or that can do us harm, foods like refined sweeteners, industrial liquid vegetable oils, partially hydrogenated vegetable oils, modern soy-based imitation foods and additives like MSG, hydrolyzed protein and artificial sweeteners, and by avoiding the overuse of white flour.

This booklet is designed to serve as a guide for shopping in supermarkets and health food stores. We have provided phone numbers or, when a phone number is not available, website addresses for items available primarily by mail order.

General guidelines and specific brand names are listed for each food category. Use the guidelines to make wise choices from among the brands available to you that are not listed specifically.

Foods found widely in stores are listed first in some categories, followed by foods available through the Internet and by mail order.

We also encourage you to avoid all processed foods and fast foods and to prepare most of what you eat, including children's school lunches, in your own kitchen using the best possible ingredients that you can find and afford.

The best rule is to eat foods that our traditional ancestors ate, prepared in the way they prepared them. Look to the elders in your communities for ancestral dietary wisdom.

The 50 Percent Campaign

Many people are making an effort to consume clean, healthy foods. Unfortunately, some of the healthiest foods are unavailable in stores. Clean raw milk from grass-fed cows usually must be purchased directly from a farm, often through cow- or herd-share programs. A farm may also be the only source available for other humanely raised animal products including grass-fed meats, pastured poultry and eggs, as well as organic or biodynamic vegetables.

We encourage our members and all conscientious consumers to “take the pledge”! That is, pledge to spend at least 50 percent of your food budget on direct purchases from farmers and artisan food producers. (With the other 50 percent, you can celebrate how small the world has become and enjoy exotic foods like rice, bananas and pineapple.)

To make things easy, many farmers have organized deliveries and drop-off locations, as well as various types of buying groups. For information about buying groups and traditional farms engaged in direct sales in your area, contact a local chapter of the Weston A. Price Foundation. Find your nearest local chapter at westonaprice.org/find-nutrient-dense-foods, or by calling (703) 820-3333. A good source for finding raw milk is our website realmilk.com.

Shopping Guide App

Besides the paper version, the Shopping Guide is available to members as a flipbook and PDF version and for purchase by the general public at westonaprice.org/shoppingguide. It is also available as a mobile app for your iPhone and Android. Would you like to search this guide online or use your mobile phone to find stores near you that carry WAPF-approved foods? Subscribe and learn more here: RealFoodMobileApp.com.

To Our Readers

The Weston A. Price Foundation has no financial interest in the companies listed in the shopping guide.

Our Shopping Guide is updated yearly. Visit our website at westonaprice.org to purchase the latest guide and to become a member—WAPF members receive the updated paper guide every year.

If you have brand names or sources of high-quality foods that you can recommend, or comments about items currently in the guide, please submit them to the Weston A. Price Foundation, westonaprice.org/shoppingguide.

Milk

BEST: Clean raw whole milk from certified healthy grass-fed animals, cow milk preferably from old-fashioned breeds that produce high-fat milk, such as Jerseys and Guernseys.

We are pleased to announce that raw milk is available for sale in stores in ten states (CA, WA, AZ, NM, ID, CT, PA, NH, ME and SC). Sources of retail raw milk have become too numerous to list. To find high-quality, unprocessed milk in your area, either in a store or from the farm, visit realmilk.com or contact a local chapter of the Weston A. Price Foundation (westonaprice.org or 703-820-3333).

GOOD: Full-fat, pasteurized, non-homogenized milk from grass-fed animals, without added vitamins. This milk is best if made into cultured dairy products such as yogurt and kefir.

Fresh Meat

BEST: Fresh or frozen beef, veal, lamb, poultry, goat and pork, including fat and organ meats, from (preferably soy-free and GMO-free) animals allowed to graze; venison and other game meat. (For a list of farmers providing grass-fed animal products, see eatwild.com or localharvest.org, or contact a chapter of the Weston A. Price Foundation, westonaprice.org or 703-820-3333.) Note: It is important to consume organ meats and meat with the fat. Consumption of lean meats can lead to deficiencies.

Processed Meat

BEST: Sausage, bacon and processed meats from (preferably soy-free and GMO-free) animals allowed to graze, processed without additives such as mono-sodium glutamate (MSG). (Note: Products containing hydrolyzed protein, citric acid, “spices,” or “natural flavors” usually contain MSG.) Pastured meats cured with salt, a small amount of sugar and naturally smoked. Also fine, pastured meats cured with sodium nitrite and added sodium erythorbates or ascorbates, which are antioxidants required by the USDA.

* While not perfect foods, these compromise products may offer benefits to those on a limited income or with limited access to better foods (including prisoners), and serve as a source of animal fat, gelatin and meat when nothing else is available.

AVOID: Most commercial sausage, bacon and processed meats containing MSG, smoke flavoring, liquid smoke, torula yeast, sodium lactate, dry milk powder or high levels of additives; processed meats that are high-pressure treated.

Pemmican and Jerky

BEST: Pemmican, jerky and other meat snacks made from (preferably soy-free and GMO-free) animals allowed to graze, processed without additives such as monosodium glutamate (MSG). (Note: Products containing hydrolyzed protein, citric acid, “spices,” or “natural flavors” usually contain MSG.) Pastured meats cured with salt, a small amount of sugar and naturally smoked. Also fine, pastured meats cured with sodium nitrite and added sodium erythorbates or ascorbates, which are antioxidants required by the USDA.

About the Weston A. Price Foundation

The Weston A. Price Foundation is a member-supported nonprofit nutrition education foundation dedicated to providing consumers with accurate information about diet and health. The Foundation has many local chapters to help people find the best quality whole foods available in their area. It also publishes a quarterly journal, Wise Traditions in Food, Farming and the Healing Arts, which provides up-to-date commentary on a variety of nutrition issues and helps consumers find foods directly from farms through its advertising section. To request a free informational brochure containing dietary guidelines and membership information, as well as find details on the local chapter nearest you, visit the Foundation's website at westonaprice.org or contact the Foundation at (703) 820-3333.
